

The Next Generation of Value-Based Arrangements: What Are the Stakes for Patients?

December 4, 2019 | 1:00 - 5:00pm
Top of the Hill Banquet & Conference Center | Washington, DC

On December 4th, please join us as NEHI convenes leading payers, biopharmaceutical manufacturers, and patient advocates on Capitol Hill to consider “The Next Generation of Value-Based Arrangements: What Are the Stakes for Patients?”

Value-based arrangements are an emerging payment model under which payers or pharmaceutical benefit managers and biopharmaceutical manufacturers agree to specific terms that tie payment to results, based on a drug’s actual impact on patients in real world medical practice.

While perspectives differ on the benefits and challenges to expanding value-based agreements, many analysts believe a new generation of value-based arrangements will play an essential role in any national strategy on coverage and payment of drugs. As health care leaders and policy makers explore the next generation of value-based arrangements, it is critical to examine what is at stake for patients and bring the patient perspective to these discussions.

Join us as we explore key questions:

- What do patients have to gain or lose from a new generation of value-based arrangements?
- How should a “next generation” of value-based arrangements address patient needs, preferences and values?
- How can we make next generation value-based arrangements truly patient-focused?

Panelists include:

Jim Clement, Coeus Consulting Group; Mitch DeKoven, IQVIA; Molly Guthrie, Susan G. Komen; Erin Huntington, Eli Lilly & Co.; Annie Kennedy, EveryLife Foundation; Rebecca Kirch, National Patient Advocate Foundation; Eric Klein, Eli Lilly & Co.; Ira Klein, Janssen; Lynn Neilson, UPMC Center for High-Value Health Care; Kristen Cox Santiago, LUNgevity Foundation; Bethanie Stein, Humana
